

Biography: Frank Vetere

Dr. Frank Vetere is a researcher in human-computer interaction and computer mediated human interactions. He works with his colleagues in the Interaction Design Group at The University of Melbourne to develop methods for designing useful, usable and satisfying technology. He has specific interest in participatory design approaches and use-centred processes for creating innovative information and communication technology. Frank is particularly interested in using these methods with mobile and ubiquitous technologies in non-work settings.